CONTEXT

Administrative/Biographical history

The Labour Research Department had its initial origins in the Fabian Society’s Enquiry into the Control of Industry Committee founded in 1912. In 1913 the Committee took on the form of the Fabian Research Department led by figures including Beatrice and Sidney Webb, George Bernard Shaw and Robin Page Arnot.

Originally the department took the form of a forum for competing theories of industrial organisation but then took on the function of providing a service for trade unions by collecting information for them rather than about them and in 1918 its membership was broadened outside of the Fabian Society and became the Labour Research Department.

Many influential figures were involved in the Labour Research Department including Barbara Drake, Joseph Rowntree, Leonard Woolf, Archibald Fenner Brockway, Emile Burns, Harry Politt and Noreen Branson.

The Labour Research Department carried out investigations into many of the major issues affecting Britain and the wider world, including women, trade unions and strikes, imperialism, the rise of Fascism and the outbreak of war, housing, racism and education. The results of these investigations were often published in their journals, which included Labour Research, Fact Service and Bargaining Report.

The Department were one of the chief critics of the Fascist Movement and published a number of publications including Who Backs Mosley? which exposed the Blackshirt Movement and They Helped Hitler which highlighted how the Chamberlain government had supposedly been involved in German rearmament.

LRD History Timeline

Origins

- 1912 – began life as the Fabian Society’s Control of Industry Committee. Which sought to achieve ‘the largest national product with an equalised distribution of services and commodities among the people.

- Can be traced back to the Webb’s campaign to break up the Poor Law in 1905 with their minority report published in 1909. The National Committee for the Prevention of Destitution (NCPD) was a derivative of the model proposed by H.G. Wells for the rejuvenation of the Fabian Society.

- The first secretary was Julian West, followed by William Mellor and Robin Page Arnot in 1914.

- 1912 – the University Socialist Federation was formed bringing together university Fabian societies with over 500 members. Involves the likes of Cole, Clifford Allen, R. Page Arnot and Ellen Wilkinson. Cambridge Fabians included James Strachey, Rupert Brooke and Hugh Dalton. By 1913 there were 11 Fabian Societies associated with the USF with 477 members. The Oxbridge societies broke away in 1915 during the Guild Socialism dispute. By 1918 there were only 3 Fabian university societies.

- Considerable research was carried out and was summed up at summer schools in 1913 and 1914 at Barrow House, Derwentwater.

- The LRD originally collected money by a levy on member’s incomes.

- The LRD originally took the form of a forum for competing theories of industrial organisation.

- In 1913 the Fabian Research Department was formally constituted with a young active membership from universities.

- In 1913 the New Statesman was founded.

- In 1913 G.D.H. Cole’s World of Labour was published.
World War One

- In autumn 1914 George Bernard Shaw became Chairman (until 1918) with G.D.H. Cole as Vice-Chairman and G.P. Blizzard as Honorary Secretary. In 1916 however Cole went to prison as a conscientious objector. Margaret Postgate took his role as secretary.

- There was an inquiry by Sidney Webb titled How to Pay for the War which proposed a tax on capital as a means of liquidating the war debts.

- In 1915 appeals for funds and volunteers appeared in the New Statesman.

- Between 1915 and 1917 Sidney Webb, Beatrice Webb and George Bernard Shaw were involved in writing reports on English Teachers' Organisations and Professional Associations.

- During the war the department changed its research objectives to those of a more immediate nature.

- In 1915 the Labour Year Book was published, this was a publication of statistical and documentary material and was funded by the Executive Committee of the Labour Party and the Parliamentary Committee of the TUC whilst the information was contributed by the LRD.

- During the war the trade unions utilised the technical skills of the LRD and a records was made of all prosecutions under the 1915 Munitions Act.

- In spring 1916 the Local Pensions Committees were set up.

- In 1916 the Trade Union Committee was set up, with the purpose of surveying the field of the trade union organisations and activity in Britain. Maps were drawn up and local investigations were held.

- In 1916 it carried out a Trade Union Survey.

- In 1916 the basis of membership was widened to allow any socialist, trade unionist or co-operator to join. From 1917 trade unions could affiliate for a small fee.

- Was a Committee of Inquiry into the Organisation of Capital of which A.L. Bacharach was Chairman and M.B. Reckitt as Secretary. This focused on the Association of Employers.
• In 1917 the Gazetteer of Trade Union Branches, Trade Councils ... was published, this was the first census of trade unionism in Great Britain.

• Numerous volunteers were employed during this period including Barbara Drake, William Mellor, Margaret Postgate, Walter Holmes and Eva Reckitt.

• In 1917 a joint committee of the LRD and the Fabian Women’s Group, which was chaired by Barbara Drake published Women in Trade Unions.

• From 1916 to 1918 J. Alan Kaye played a major role in developing the LRD into a body actively participating in the working-class movement.

• Numerous organisations were involved in the LRD including members from the Fabians, Fabian Nursery, Guild Socialists, Church Socialist League, W.E.A. and the University Socialist Federation.

• From 1917 onwards H.P. Rathbone played an active role in developing the LRD into an organisation that dealt with all sorts of inquiries into capitalism.

• In 1917 the Monthly Circular was founded with an initial circulation of 200, which by 1925 had grown to 10,000.

• In 1918 Arthur Henderson who was so impressed with the LRD’s work that he incorporated it into the structure of his Labour Party.

• In 1919 a Local Government Handbook was published.

• In 1920 only a fifth of the department’s funding came from labour movement affiliations the rest coming from private donations.

• The war strengthened relations between liberals and socialists, and these common concerns won over new supporters.

• In 1919 the LRD established the International Agreements Committee, which was contributed to by Joseph Rowntree and Noel Buxton and resulted in books by Leonard Woolf including International Government (1916) and Empire and Commerce in Africa (1920), which provided financial surplus.

• In 1920 there was the formation of a separate business to deal with the department’s publishing. This was called The Labour Publishing Company Limited and was managed by B. Langdon Davies.

• The FRD relied organisationally on the young activists and financially on the older liberal benefactors. Most of the staff were volunteers and there was a sense of shared commitment and comradeship. Nearly all the activists were under 30 and called themselves the ‘movement’.

- There were quite a few women, which was unusual at the time, in fact 5 of the 12 members of the LRD’s first committee were women and included Margaret Cole.

- The LRD depended financially on the likes of Joseph Rowntree and Ernest Simon who were prompted to donate by the likes of the Webbs (this was disliked by the young activists). Rebels against the funding included Sadie Hieser and Rose Cohen. Some saw the Webbs as exploiters these included Leonard Woolf, Hugh Dalton and Alan Kaye.

- R. Palme Dutt was taken on as the LRD’s secretary and was then in charge of its international section.

- A Committee of Inquiry into the Prison System was founded with Sir Sydney Oliver as its Chairman and Stephen Hobhouse and A. Fenner Brockway as its secretaries. This inquiry produced the report English Prisons Today.

- In 1919 the LRD became involved with the Coal Industry Commission (Sankey) as miners were making economic claims and there were demands for coalmine nationalisation and workers control. The commission was made up of government nominees and nominees of the Miners Federation of Great Britain. The LRD was involved in the preparation of evidence and the presentation of the report Facts from the Coal Commission.

- In 1919 a railway strike took place involving the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen and the National Union of Railwaymen. With the LRD producing a report and publicity work.

Post World War One

- In 1921 the choice was presented to the LRD of either being absorbed by the official structure of the Labour Party or going it alone entirely. They decided to go it alone and discussions were opened up with the Russians regarding support.

- In 1921 the LRD agrees to provide ARCOS with a monthly survey in return for a substantial fee.

- In 1921 George Bernard Shaw and Barbara Drake resigned from the executive over the issue of the involvement of the Russians.
• The Comintern gave £5000 a year, which was more than double the LRD’s anticipated income from domestic sources and enabled the expansion to 13 paid staff including Hugh Rathbone.

• The Labour Monthly journal was established and was edited by Duff and featured contributions by Cole and Shaw.

• In 1920 Emile Burns became secretary of the LRD.

• In 1920 Robin Arnot became one of the founding members of the Communist Party of Great Britain.

• The Amalgamated Society of Engineers through their secretary Tom Mann asked for the LRD’s help in collecting examples of injustices and prosecutions.

• In 1920 W.H. Hutchinson became the LRD Chairman and Ellen Wilkinson known as Red Ellen became a prominent member of the executive.

• In 1921 the AGM agreed on the LRD having an elected Executive Committee.

• In 1921 an Inquiry into the Cotton Industry was carried out on behalf of the United Textile Factory Workers Association. This resulted in 2 reports and formed a very detailed study of industry in the post-war period and dealt with issues such as working hours, unemployment and working conditions.

• From 1921 to 1922 there was an Engineers Lock Out organised by the Amalgamated Engineering Union. The LRD produced publicity for them including the pamphlets Why we are Locked Out and The Attempt to Smash the AEU. The LRD also produced the book Labour and Capital in Engineering, which was the first in the series.

LRD after 1923

• The ARCOS (All-Russian Co-operative Society) contract was terminated in 1923 and the introduction of communist fraction work caused problems within the LRD.

• In 1923 Labour and Capital in Parliament was published for the first time and analysed the business interests of MPs.

• In 1924 Cole resigned.
In 1926 there were 503 affiliated organisations including 66 national unions but in 1931 this had dropped to 337 organisations and 44 unions.

The Monthly Circular was renamed the Labour Research and circulation figures stood at approx 7000. The first editor was Margaret Postgate who edited it to the mid 1920s. She was succeeded by Emile Burns then Bill Williams. Three female editors Eva Reckitt, Margot Heinemann and Noreen Branson followed them. They were followed in 1972 by Peter Duffy, Brenda Kirsch in 1975, John Walker in 1982 and Claire Ruhemann in 1985.

The LRD began to attract new recruits such as Jane Tabrisky (Degras), John Cornford, Harry Politt and in 1938 Noreen Branson.

Between 1923 and 1924 numerous inquiries were carried out on behalf of trade unions into specialist industries. These included inquiries on behalf of the National Federation of Building Trade Operatives, National Society of Pottery Workers, National Association of Unions in the Textile Trade, National Union of Foundry Workers, Ship Constructors’ and Shipwrights’ Association, Operative Cotton Spinners, Shop Assistants’ Union, Platen Machine Minders and the Irish Trades Union Congress.

In 1924 the Miners’ Federation of Great Britain in connection with the Buckmaster Court of Inquiry asked the LRD to gather materials and statistics for the miner’s case.

In 1924 there was an increase in inquiries undertaken by the LRD for trade unions including the Musicians Union, Trade Union Members of the Joint Industrial Committee for Electricity Supply, Railway Clerks’ Association, Post Office Controlling Officers’ Association, Amalgamated Engineering Union and the Miners’ Federation (in conjunction with the Royal Commission on the Coal Industry).

Publications in the Labour and Capital Series included: The Press (Sales of 6,000), Labour and Capital on the Railway (Sales of 7,000), Shipping (Sales of 6,000) and Steel (Sales of 5,000).

From 1924 to 1925 15 Labour White Papers were published, these were articles from the Monthly Circular reprinted as penny pamphlets.

In 1926 the LRD published 26 leaflets for miners and two books on the General Strike, these included an account by Robin Page Arnot and a study by Emile Burns.

Between 1927 and 1928 there was a drop in affiliated bodies due to the Trades Disputes Act of 1927.
• In 1928 W.H. Williams became secretary for 15 years.

• In 1931 W. Fox joined the LRD as a researcher and contributed to many pamphlets.

• In 1934 the LRD organised a number of conferences on the subject of employers and notable figures titled Who’s Who.

• In 1934 Joan Beauchamp published British Imperialism in India she also contributed a number of articles about women in industry.

• In 1935 Who’s Who in Arms was published, a detailed study of the finance and policy of armaments firms.

• The LRD were one of the chief critics of the Fascist movement and published a number of publications including Who Backs Mosley, which exposed the Blackshirt Movement and They Helped Hitler, which highlighted how the City of London and the Chamberlain government had been involved in German rearmament.

• In 1936 they informed the British public about Franco and the Spanish Civil War.

• In 1939 the Local Government News Service, a monthly bulletin was launched. It was later renamed the Social Service News.

• Between 1931 and 1939 affiliated organisations rose from 337 to 467, sales of Labour Research rose to 8,500 and annual pamphlet sales topped 100,000.

• In October 1939 A Workers Guide to Law in Wartime was published and a weekly bulletin called LRD Fact Service was launched.

• By June 1940 the number of affiliated organisations had risen to 519.

• In October 1940 the LRD issued War Injury and War Damage – Your Rights to Compensation in conjunction with the Tenants Association. It sold over 600,000 copies.

• In 1941 the first of the LRD’s workers pocket series pamphlets was published – Fire Watching: the Workers Rights. In the year up to June 1941 over 200,000 LRD pamphlets were sold.

• In September 1941 the LRD staged a conference What’s Holding Up Production which was attended by 800 people. It was chaired by J.H. Potts and was opened by W.H. Williams.
Post World War Two

- In 1942 the Labour Party and the TUC announced that the LRD was under Communist influence and so forbade association with them. In April 1942 the LRD issued a public statement refuting the allegations. In 1943 the TUC removed the LRD from the proscribed list.

- Between June 1941 and June 1942 pamphlet sales topped 300,000.

- Between June 1943 and June 1944 the number of meetings addressed by LRD speakers rose to 86 and the number of enquiries totalled 2,000.

- The Industrial Health Committee was formed in the aftermath of World War Two.

- In 1945 Henry Parsons became the secretary of the LRD.

- In 1947 W.H. Thompson passed away and legal advice was taken over by Owen Parsons.

- In 1950 the Social Service News merged with the Labour Research.

- In 1950 the AEU decided to disaffiliate.

- The 1950s marked a downturn with the number of affiliated organisations dropping, circulation of journals down and pamphlet sales decreasing. It began to pick up again though in 1958 with new issues emerging.

- In 1957 the LRD published Tenants Guide to the 1957 Rent Act which was a major publication.

- The LRD published a pocket guide to picketing titled Picket's Bible.

- In 1965 Roger Simon became secretary of the LRD replacing Henry Parsons who had died.

- In 1968 the LRD countered Enoch Powell's speeches with the publication Immigration: Facts v Myths.

- In 1970 the LRD was involved in giving guidance on the Equal Pay Act and published the pamphlet Money: How to Read a Balance Sheet.

- In 1977 Roger Simon retired and was replaced by Lionel Fulton.
